In today's play, four time PacLife doubles winners and defending title holders from 2006 and 2005, Daniel Nestor of Canada and Mark Knowles of the Bahamas were upset by a little known Czech Republic team of Lukas Dlouhy and David Skoch in the first round.

After a first set tiebreaker, which the Nestor-Knowles team lost 7 points to 4, the boys rebounded to take the second set 6 love. Then to lose the deciding super tiebreaker, 10 points to 8, it led to a very unexpected result which certainly represents a very bad day at the office for Daniel Nestor and Co, perennially top ranked exponents of the doubles game with his career partner Mark Knowles.

This is not the regular fashion in which this perpetually dominant team intended to kick off their 2007 ATP Masters Circuit. Next stop, the Sony Ericsson in Miami, which hopefully will bring better results.
